Without appropriations increase

Auburn May Lose Accreditation

Auburn faces a serious danger of faculty depletion and loss of accreditation in a number of the most important fields of study or the unhappy alternative of closing its doors to a substantial number of the young people who will hopefully seek admission in the near future. The college, in the opinion of both administration and the board of trustees, can avoid such undesirable consequences and curtailment of research and extension services to the people of Alabama only with a forthcoming increase in State funds.

Depletion of faculty is, in reality, not just a future danger, but a process already underway. At least 74 additional teachers are needed to provide the minimal requirements for adequate instruction of the students already enrolled (Enrollment has increased by 1,400 during the past two years and successive increases in high school enrollments indicate more pronounced future increases in applications for college training).

The API board of trustees, in its annual spring meeting June 4, called particular attention to the plight of the college in problems of instruction. In a resolution to the Governor and the Legislature, they urged the granting of the full $7,143,000 appropriation requested by the college for each of the next two years and noted that "present students, immediately upon graduation, especially in engineering and related technical fields, often command higher starting salaries than those being paid many professors under whom they studied."

Auburn faces two-way competition in retaining the most competent members of its present staff and in replacing those which it has already lost. Not only private industry but also other colleges throughout the nation, and even some in neighboring states, offer more lucrative salaries — incomes ranging from one-third greater to more than double those which API can afford with its present income.

The urgency of the present concern about Auburn's economic crisis is underscored by a proposed across-the-board cut in education appropriations made by Gov. James E. Folsom in the recommended budget which he submitted to the Legislature. The Folsom budget included a reduction of API's request to $4,623,000 annually for the next two years. The annual appropriation for Auburn approved two years ago amounted to $5,233,850 but was later reduced to $5,028,850 by a special session of the legislature. A surplus of more than $170,000 for the biennium increased the appropriation slightly. A later prorated reduction for all state schools reduced this year's anticipated appropriation to $4,768,843.

Both the board of trustees and President Ralph B. Draughon and his administrative associates have emphasized that rigid economies necessary under present appropriations and prorations have not eased the financial stress. Student fees have been raised across-the-board an average of almost 30 per cent. Purchases of necessary instructional supplies, library books, and research and laboratory equipment have been curtailed—at one point to the extent that some students once purchased chalk so that their instructor might jot on the blackboard the spelling of polysyllabic terms used in his lectures.

Inadequate facilities and supplies compound the difficulties which the college faces in fulfilling its obligations in at least two ways. The obvious necessity for laboratories, machines, and well-stocked bookshelves for student and staff research in a technical age scarcely requires comment. Perhaps less obvious is the fact that maintenance of a highly competent college staff is as dependent upon adequate facilities as upon adequate salaries. Alleged eccentricities of scholarly and scientific geniuses have long served as source material for popular wits and caricaturists. One valid peculiarity of the professional genius that has received less than deserved attention bears di-

Auburn and Other Alabama Colleges 1958?

A warning that the state colleges of Alabama may be forced to arbitrarily limit enrollments next year unless substantial increases are made in state appropriations for higher education was issued jointly by the seven presidents of Alabama's white state colleges on June 11. The college presidents gave the warning in a public statement addressed to Gov. James E. Folsom and the Alabama Legislature. Enrollment limitation may become necessary to prevent loss of accreditation unless colleges have adequate funds to secure competent faculties for increasing enrollments.

For outstanding Ala. women

Trustees Name Girls' Dorms

Auburn's twelve women's dormitories have been named by the API board of trustees for twelve women who have been prominent in the history of the college or of Alabama.

Four of the women are living and the Legislature must approve the use of their names. Alabama law prohibits naming a state building after a living person unless approved by the Legislature.

The living women are Margaret Kate Teague, now Mrs. Hagler of Tulsa, Okla., who was one of the first three women to graduate from API in 1894; Dana King Gatchell, Auburn home economics teacher for 30 years, now a Birmingham resident; Mrs. Marie Bankhead Owen, head of the State Department of Archives and History for many years; and Helen Keller, the blind and deaf Tuscumbia native who has become internationally famous as a writer and lecturer.

Others for whom the dormitories have been named are Elizabeth Taylor Harper, who suggested the name of Auburn for the town; Willie Gertrude Little and Kate Conway Brown, other women graduates of 1894; Miss Allie Glenn, API treasurer for 47 years; Letitia Dowdell, wife of the late Dr. B. B. Ross who headed the API Chemistry Department for many years and was institution president for a short time.

Anne White Mell, wife of Dr. P. H. Mell, professor of geology and natural history and director of the Alabama Weather Service, later President of Clemson College; Mary Lane, daughter of Brig. Gen. James H. Lane and wife of Dr. George Petrie, former Dean of the Graduate School and Head of the History Department; Ella V. Lupton, wife of N. G. Lupton, distinguished scientist and chemist of the state.

Academic Freedom

The API board of trustees, at its June 4 meeting, established a three man committee to meet with a committee of the college faculty for discussion of the question of academic freedom. Paul S. Haley will serve as chairman of the committee with Frank P. Samford and Redus Collier as members. This board action followed the ensuing statement by Mr. Haley:

"Inasmuch as members of the faculty have expressed concern over the attitude of this board on the question of academic freedom, the chairman has appointed a committee to meet with a committee of the faculty for the purpose of discussing fully the attitude of the board toward its responsibilities in regard to the question, and others affecting security, welfare, and progress of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute."

Subsequent to the meeting of the board, Dr. Norman A. Brittin, chairman of the Faculty Council, has ap-

One-Third Take Remedial English

One of each three entering Auburn freshmen will have to take five or more hours of remedial (non-credit) English in preparation for the basic English composition courses. The remedial problem is not new, nor is it peculiar to API. It began at Auburn with the establishment of the college; it exists now in varying degrees of seriousness across the United States. However, the loss of time and efficiency in studies that result from inadequate student preparation in reading, interpreting, and writing their native language is a matter of concern to API and to its English Department in particular.

The English Department at Auburn is taking a number of steps in an attempt to find at least a partial solution to the problem. In doing so it is not working unilaterally, for it finds willing allies in the high school English teachers of Alabama and the Association of College English Teachers of Alabama (ACETA). ACETA not only is planning and working cooperatively with the high school English teachers but also plans to work cooperatively with the Alabama Council on Teacher Education.

If lack of proficiency in the use of English were an isolated weakness which a five-hour course in fundamentals would remedy, the problem would perhaps not merit the widespread attention that it is receiving. But there is evidence of a direct correlation between a student's success or failure in basic English and his success or failure in his collegiate career. At Auburn approximately 63 of each 100 students who do not find remedial English necessary continue in college beyond the fifth quarter, whereas of the remedial group only 37 of each 100 remain. Apparently even more significant is the fact that of those who fail the first five hours remedial English approximately 15 of each 100 remain, whereas of those who receive a D in remedial 36 of each 100 remain and of those who receive a C or better in remedial 53 of each 100 remain.

For the past four years a member of the API English Department has served as chairman of an ACETA committee which has provided high school English teachers and principals with a record of English placement scores of Alabama students entering state colleges. The list contains a numerical record of the scores of students from each high school. Reports on placement scores and progress in college English of the former students of individual high school teachers have been made available upon request by the teacher concerned. A cumulative five-year report will be made next year.

Now underway is a planned pamphlet "College English for High School Students" which will be mailed to Alabama high schools for distribution to each high school senior. In addition to explaining the general college English program, the pamphlet will contain samples of marked and graded freshman themes with constructive critical commentaries.

During the past spring, area meetings of college and high school English teachers were held on all state college campuses. The Auburn meeting was well attended by area high school teachers. A general forum on the problems of preparation for college English was led by a mixed panel of high school and college teachers. The group agreed that high school students do not get enough practice in writing original compositions and that under existing loads the high school teacher cannot find time to mark and grade an adequate number of such compositions. An average length theme, or essay, requires from 10 to 30 minutes for marking and grading. Many high school teachers have from 170 to 200 individual students in the course of a day's classes. In addition to theme, paragraph, and literature and grammar test grading, plus preparation for daily classroom lessons, the senior English teacher usually has the senior class homeroom which involves directing the senior play and other senior activities including graduation rehearsals.

Substitution of a number of original paragraphs for some of the desired themes was one suggested partial solution. A program on the part of the ACETA group at Auburn to make the public and school administrators aware of the need of more theme writing and more time for theme grading was another planned approach. The API English Department agreed to send an advisory planning group to high schools in which principals and teachers desire such service.

'The Two R's' on TV

Dr. James R. Woodall is again presenting the API English Department's "The Two R's" over the Alabama Educational Television Network—Channels 2, 7, and 10—from 6:30 to 7:00 p.m. each Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. The program, which is designed to teach reading and composition to people of all ages and degrees of learning, was viewed by an estimated 20,000 people last year. It elicited correspondence from almost 1,000 people. Response to date this summer has equaled that of last year.

The success of the program last year gained it nation-wide interest. Dr. Woodall was asked to speak about it at the National Education Broadcaster's Convention last fall. Recently, Dr. Woodall was featured alongside Jerry Lewis in the TV Guide.

The program this year follows the same pattern of that given last year, covering English fundamentals from phonics—the sounds of individual letters—to the whole composition. One period each week is devoted to criticism of compositions submitted to the program. Authors of the compositions discussed remain anonymous, but an individual criticism is sent, along with his corrected theme, to each person who submits an original composition. Desirable books are given as awards for outstanding compositions submitted to the program.

pointed the following members of the faculty to serve with him on a committee to meet with the board committee: Dr. David H. Malone, English; Dr. William S. Smith, Speech; Adm. Albert S. Sprague, Electrical Engineering; Dr. John S. Dendy, Zoology-Entomology; Dr. Henry S. Ward, Botany; Prof. Oliver Turner Ivey, History.

In another action the board approved an application to the Federal Housing and Home Finance agency for a loan of two million dollars to cover the proposed construction of 240 dwelling units for married students. Plans are to construct 160 one-bedroom units and 80 two-bedroom units. The board had previously made a preliminary application for a loan to build 336 family units. Upon negotiations with the Housing Agency the plan was modified and the agency gave tentative approval for the loan to cover 240 units. The board also authorized the purchase of 373 acres of land bordering the campus on the southwest to provide for anticipated campus expansion.

rectly upon Auburn's present problems. That personality quirk is that the true scholar or scientist may bear a number of inconveniences and privations if he is given the material and space necessary to pursue the specialty to which he has dedicated himself. When these prerequisites are not provided, he is likely to seek them elsewhere.

The classroom shortage and the limitations of the API library illustrate the need for expanded facilities across the campus. The World War II constructed temporary buildings have become permanent classroom necessities, not for occasional classes but from seven or eight a.m. to five or six p.m. Every possible cubby-hole, not otherwise in use, including basement rooms under the shop buildings, has been converted to classroom use.

Students doing special library research on a present problem may have to rely upon books that were standard 25 or 50 years ago and upon short articles in current periodicals. Insufficient copies of some books available often mean waiting until the need has passed. Not only library seating facilities but also storage facilities are inadequate. Many books—some of them in categories that are in daily use—are in storage in temporary buildings.

Without the increased funds which it needs, the alternatives which Auburn faces might be restated as the limitation of college training to only a fortunate group, perhaps even a minority, of those who seek future admission or an embarkation on a program of mass training in mediocrity, the latter of which may not even be possible for the preponderant majority of those seeking admission.

Mrs. Frances R. McLeod, assistant professor of English, and students James Warren, Marion Junction, and Bette McMinn, Cullman, are spending one of the many conference hours required to enable the remedial English student to gain satisfactory proficiency in writing.

Charles W. Scott, his wife (Monta Mitchell, '44) and children Bill, Tom, and Susan now live in Buffalo, N. Y., where he is associated with the Industrial Division of Fuller Brush Co.

ANDERSON ... new director

R. C. Anderson, '42 Heads Southern Education Board

Dr. Robert C. Anderson, native of Alabama and a graduate of API, has been appointed director of the Southern Regional Education Board to succeed Dr. John Ivey, '40, of Auburn. Dr. Anderson joined the SREB staff in Atlanta in 1953 and has served as associate director since 1955.

The new director received a bachelor's degree in science and literature at API in 1942, a master's at the University of North Carolina and a Ph.D. at New York University. He served as assistant to the dean of the school of education at NYU from 1948 through 1950 and later was director of the graduate school at Memphis State College.

At Auburn he was editor of the Plainsman and a member of Omicron Delta Kappa honorary fraternity. His wife is the former Margaret Spidle, '42, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Spidle of Auburn.

A native of Birmingham, he was named executive associate of SREB four years ago and became associate director for administration two years later. He served as acting director in 1956 while Dr. Ivey was on a study tour abroad under an Eisenhower Fellowship.

AUBURN CLUB NEWS

Forty-one Auburn alumni met in Dallas, Tex., May 17 to reorganize the North Texas Chapter of the Auburn Alumni Association, which had lapsed into inactivity during the past seven years.

Drawing alumni from Dallas, Fort Worth, and surrounding cities, the chapter elected officers and laid plans for supporting Auburn teams in scheduled athletic events between Auburn and Texas schools. Particular attention was directed toward the impending football game between Auburn and Houston this fall.

Robert G. Hill, '47, was elected president; Ronald K. Owen, '55, first vice-president; Samuel A. Ellsberry, '08, second vice-president; and Mrs. James Dillon, '55, secretary-treasurer.

Responsible for reconvening the chapter were Jack D. Tate, '48; Horace E. Dryden Jr., '50; and Edward A. Wagner, '43, who sent out invitations and made arrangements for the meeting.

JOB OPPORTUNITIES

Virginia-Carolina Chemical Corporation has notified the Alumnnews of the following positions open with that firm:

Two Administrative Assistants to General Sales Manager, Fertilizer Division. Applicants should have three to five years sales experience, should be a college graduate (graduate degrees preferred) and under 35 years of age; salary range is open.

Assistant Controller. Applicants should be between 30-40 years and thoroughly experienced in all phases of accounting, both in line and staff capacities; salary range is open.

Sales Engineer—Mining Division. Applicants should have completed a standard college engineering course, preferably with major in mechanical, mining, or metallurgical engineering and a minimum of five years' experience in production and/or sales; should be 37 or younger; salary open.

Born: A son, Kelly Stewart, to Mr. and Mrs. Herbert M. Martin Jr. (Elizabeth Allen Odom, '43) May 13 in Birmingham.

Sam U. Hardie, Florence, has qualified as a member of the 1957 Million Dollar Round Table, an organization designed to keep members abreast of new developments in taxation, estate planning, and business insurance. He is a representative of the American National Insurance Co.

Robert B. Sims has been elected as the new president of the Auburn Civitan Club.

Raymond L. Livingston has left his position as assistant horticulturist with the Alabama Agricultural Experiment Station to become horticulturist for fruits and nuts with the Georgia Agricultural Extension Service, Athens, Ga.

Tigers Finish Great Year In All Sports

Finishing one of their greatest athletic years in a good while, Auburn teams posted an overall record of 55 wins and 38 losses, plus the fact that they had ten men picked as All-SEC'ers in the various sports. This overall mark was compiled from the records of football, basketball, baseball, track, golf, tennis, wrestling and cross country.

The Tigers placed men on all teams in the three major sports with Tommy Lorno, Jimmy Phillips and Ernie Danjean being selected in football; Rex Frederick, Jimmy Lee and Henry Hart in basketball, and L. F. Lanier, Rex Frederick, Pat Duke and Lloyd Nix in baseball. Frederick was the only Tiger to be picked in two sports.

In football the Plainsman proved that they were on the rise as an SEC power as they posted a 7-3 record and finished in fifth place in the conference. Their victories were over Alabama, Kentucky, Mississippi State, Georgia, Houston, FSU and Furman while their defeats came at the hands of Georgia Tech, Florida and Tennessee.

On a whole the Villagers did an excellent job, leading the SEC in rushing yardage with 276 yards per game and in total offense with 375 yards per game. They were third in the Conference and seventh nationally in defense, allowing their opponent only 208.3 yards per game.

Lorino, tabbed as one of the greatest backs in the history of the Plains, led the conference in rushing with 692 yards. This was an average of 8.44 yards per carry and eclipsed the old SEC mark. This was also tops in the country.

Phillips led the SEC in pass receiving as he snagged 23 passes good for

Elliott

Phillips

383 yards and four touchdowns.

The Tigers should have an even greater team next year as they have already been picked for second place in the SEC.

On the hardwood the Villagers placed fifth in the league, sporting an 8-6 with a 13-8 overall. They finished second in the Carousel Tournament, defeating Clemson and St. Josephs before bowing out to Wake Forest in the finals.

Three Tigers, Rex Frederick, Jimmy Lee and Henry Hart, were picked on the Soph All-SEC team. These three were mainly responsible for setting ten new records. The main record that was broken was the fact that Frederick grabbed 322 rebounds which was an average of 15.3 per game.

Also during the basketball campaign the Crimson Tide fell before the onslaught of the Plainsmen.

In between these two sports the cross country team was busy at work, winning three regular season meets and coming in second in the SEC.

As usual, Coach "Swede" Umbach finished another undefeated season, winning seven matches and copping his eleventh SEIWA championship. In winning the SEIWA the Tigers scored 98 points. While the runner-up, Chattanooga, had 73 points.

One of the highlights of the meet occurred when Walter Keller dethroned defending champion Jerry Waters in the 123-pound class. In the finals of the meet the Plainsmen had eight out of nine men wrestling. Of these eight, six turned out to be SEIWA champs. They were Gerald Cresap, Bob Mason, Vic Maldonado, Arnold Haugen and William Rankin.

Mason and Maldonado went through the entire season without defeat.

After this came the spring sports, baseball, tennis, golf and track. All of the teams were highly successful with the exception of Coach Luther Young's netters. They had an inexperienced team and could only manage to win one match.

Under the direction of Coach Ken Wheeler the Tiger golfers finished a .500 season, winning five and losing five. They defeated Troy twice, Mercer twice and Alabama while losing to Tech twice, FSU twice and Alabama. The golf future looks very bright as only one man, Don Smith, will graduate.

In baseball this year the Orange and Blue accomplished something that they couldn't do for quite a while—and that was to beat Alabama. This Tiger win broke a ten game streak for the Tide.

On paper the Tigers finished second in the conference according to the won and loss record, but the playoffs were between Tech and Alabama. The Villagers placed four men on the All-SEC unit in the persons of L. F. Lanier, Rex Frederick, Pat Duke and Lloyd Nix. Lanier led the hitters with a .372 mark, bashing out 35 base hits and scoring 25 runs. Frederick was tops in the RBI department with 26 and tied Billy Ray Roberson in total bases with 46. Roberson also led in doubles, 8, and stolen bases with 8.

Lloyd Nix posted the top fielding average handling 261 chances and only making one error.

Leading the pitchers was Fred McDuffie with a 2.08 earned run average while posting a 4-3 record. Other pitchers who won four games were Wynton Overstreet and Henry Clay Dumas.

In the last sport to be completed—track—the Plainsmen pulled a come from behind second place edging Florida by one point. During the regular season they won three meets and lost one.

Hart

Maldonado

Bill Yarbrough and Ellsworth Richter won the high hurdles and the two-mile, respectively, in the SEC meet while Sonny Alsop finished in a tie for second in the pole vault.

Other point makers for the Plainsmen were Roy Costner, Pete Calhoun, Paul Krebs, Mavern Parker, Jimmy Phillips and Leonard Allen.

Prof. Eaton Retires

William Hunt Eaton, Auburn's genial gentleman of dairy husbandry, concluded his 39-year career at API on June 15. The unique personality which enabled him to begin a lecture on dairying with a quotation from Shakespeare or a humorous episode from political history, without either seeming incongruous, has endeared him to thousands of Auburn alumni.

Prof. Eaton's "Gentlemen, a dairy cow is a lady and should be treated as such" is as familiar to Ag Hill students as are the opening lines of the Declaration of Independence to most high school students of American history.

At 70, this associate professor of dairy husbandry, API School of Agriculture, has left the classroom and textbooks to devote fulltime to "fishing, growing camellias, and writing."

He has taught more than 4,000 Auburn students. Recently in a certificate of appreciation for services rendered by Eaton, the staffs of the API School of Agriculture and Agricultural Experiment Station pointed to the inspiration of "his unique personality and gentlemanly ways which led students and staff to appreciate and to strive for finer things of life."

Eaton came to Auburn in 1918 from North Carolina as assistant dairy husbandman for the API Agricultural Extension Service. Two years later he was appointed associate professor of dairy husbandry.

He grew up on a farm in North Carolina's Piedmont area and learned to love dairy cows when he worked his way through North Carolina State College working on the school's dairy farm.

Eaton served for 20 years as secretary-treasurer of the Alabama Jersey Cattle Club. He also was a vice-president of the organization.

When Eaton joined the Auburn staff, the Alabama dairy industry was in its infancy. Eaton's teaching and research contributed much to the progress in the State's dairy industry during the past 30 years.

W. H. EATON

He is an Auburn civic leader. He served as chairman of the Lee County Red Cross chapter and as treasurer of the chapter's War Fund. Eaton is a leader in Auburn's First Baptist Church. He holds membership in Gamma Sigma Delta, honor society of agriculture; Alpha Delta Gamma, social fraternity; and the Kiwanis Club. He is a charter member of the Auburn Kiwanis Club.

For his Red Cross services, Professor Eaton received a special citation from President Eisenhower. Professor Eaton takes pride in first being a family man, second being a church worker, and third working for betterment of Alabama's dairy industry. Professor and Mrs. Eaton, also a native of North Carolina, make their home at 115 Burton Street. They have two daughters and three grandchildren.

"He might have inspired another Pasteur..."

"You should have watched him in the classroom. Any college president would have been as proud of him as I was."

"It was almost magic the way he created a love for learning in his students. You could see it in their eyes... and in their work."

"He looked worn out the day he finally made up his mind. Told me there wasn't anything in the world he'd rather do than teach... hardest decision he'd ever made to give it up."

"But how can I provide the kind of life I want for my family on my college teacher's pay?" he asked.

"I didn't have an answer for that one. So, he's leaving for a new kind of job at twice the salary."

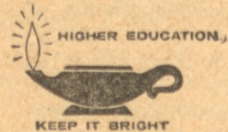

"But... who knows what a world of good he might have inspired as a teacher!"

Unfortunately for America, this same scene is being repeated all over the country. Men and women whose talents as teachers could bring great things to pass are leaving academic life for other fields.

This incredible waste hurts all of us. For we may well be losing the inspiration that could lead some young mind to discoveries benefiting the whole human race.

As a nation whose very destiny depends on the development of brainpower, can we afford to let this situation continue?

Help the colleges or universities of your choice. Help them plan for stronger, better-paid faculties. The returns can be greater than you think.

If you want to know what the college crisis means to you, write for a free booklet to: HIGHER EDUCATION, Box 36, Times Square Station, New York 36, New York.
